

BOWMAN BROS. DID NOT KILL W. PLEUKHARP

Otis Eveland, Eye-Witness to Shooting, Fails to Identify Men

CASE COMPLICATED

Two Men Are Identified As Gangster, Though

"They are not the men who attacked Mr. Pleukharp."

Those few words spoken by Otis Eveland, South Bloomingville, filling station operator, in the county jail at Georgetown, O., Brown-co, when he was confronted late Tuesday by two bandits who gave their names as Howard and Neal Bowman, more than ever complicated the investigation of the untimely death of Walter M. Pleukharp, 55, influential South Bloomingville merchant. Eveland, in the store with Mr. Pleukharp when two bandits entered and, after asking for cigarettes, shot and killed Pleukharp when he attempted to obtain a revolver, is the only eye-witness to the fatal shooting, and the only person who can possibly identify the killers.

Upon his few words dwelt the fate of the two men, for it was indicated by Brown-co authorities that if two of the three men arrested there for bank robbery were identified as the killers of the South Bloomingville man, that they would be turned over to Hocking-co for prosecution.

EVELAND IS KEY

At the time of the shooting, even before Mr. Pleukharp had passed away, victim of his wounds, Eveland identified pictures in Logan as the Bowman brothers. At once a search for these men was begun. When two bandits who gave their names as Howard and Neal Bowman were arrested with a third man, Lyle Cornell, of Texas, at Higginsport, O., Monday evening, after a bank robbery, Hocking-co authorities were more than pleased for they thought at last the solution to the murder was solved; even though the two men denied that they were the notorious Bowman gangsters, wanted in nearly every community in southern Ohio.

Sheriff Sol Edinger and Deputy Sheriff Joe Farbeann, of Logan, hurried with Eveland to Georgetown, where Eveland said that the men were not those who shot Mr. Pleukharp. Previous to the arrival of the Hocking-co trio, the men had positively been identified as the Bowman brothers on whose heads much reward money has been offered in various cities.

Chillicothe police were pleased to hear of the identification of the men for they were wanted there for a series of robberies.

REIGN OF CAPONE ENDS WITH LONG JAIL TERM INEVITABLE

"I Hope They're Satisfied," Chicago Gangster Says After Pleading Guilty Before U. S. Judge; Sentence To Be Passed June 30.

CHICAGO, June 17.—"Scarface Al" Capone's days of freedom were numbered today, and numbered exceedingly small, as he is to appear before Federal Judge Wilkerson, June 30, to be sentenced for evasion of income tax payments to the government and for conspiracy to violate the national prohibition laws. He may be in jail in three weeks.

His pleading of guilty yesterday to all charges the United States district attorney was hailed in Chicago as being the end of his gang and its hold on this city. His surrender implied the downfall of his entire gang for it showed that he could not beat the same evidence which the government has against 68 defendants in the same beer conspiracy.

VICTORY FOR U. S.

The abdication of this king that ruled the underworld through a decade of murder and violence was accomplished in a short, three minutes of court procedure but only after three years of intensive investigation by co-ordinated investigators of Uncle Sam's forces. Capone appeared in federal court in a brown suit which defied description and brought forth adjectives such as "banana-colored suit of camel's hair" and "a bilious sulphur." Trying to appear jovial, he succeeded in acting a little nervous after his guarded entrance from a freight elevator.

Capone's comment after entering his plea was, "well, I hope they're satisfied." "They," personified by District Attorney George E. Q. Johnson expressed satisfaction of work well done and John said he would "sleep easy for the first time in a long while."

Speculation on the length of Capone's term in the Federal penitentiary revolved about the probability of less than a five-year sentence although a maximum of 34 years and $90,000 fines was possible.

It will not be Capone's first experience in jail as he spent nearly a year in one at Philadelphia with his bodyguard, Frank Rio.

There was a report that one reason which led to the plea of guilty was that at 32, Capone thought he was young enough to "retire" for a few years and emerge after the depression was over to take up his reign again.

Meanwhile, those familiar with the underworld watched to see who would rise, if anyone to take Capone's place. Custom has decreed that the bodyguard of the deceased leader step forward but Rio is regarded as too soft. One rumor had John Torrio, whom Capone supplanted, planning a comeback.

RAILWAYS NATION WIDE RATE BOOS

Interstate Commerce Commission to Act Immediately on Case

REASONS STATED

15 Per Cent Increase Freight Asked

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Fronted with serious limitations of their financial resources, the railroads of the country today presented a 15 per cent increase in freight rates to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

It has been unanimously announced on behalf of the commission that the petition was given precedence over all other matters now pending.

Specifically, the railroads asked to be permitted to increase freight rates and charges, including joint rail and water rates, charges, with such adjustments in the case of coal, oil and other commodities as will serve existing differentials.

PERCENTAGE SCALE

Instead of horizontal scale, the railroads asked the increase to be limited by the use of a percentage scale, and that as to coal, oil and certain other commodities specific tariffs complying with ordinary requirements of publication be filed.

The petition said the increase will, as estimated on the basis of traffic of recent months and assuming the continuance of the present economy in transportation and maintenance, result in a net railway operating loss this year of approximately $100,000,000.

"Since this return will be below the return presented last year, the case presented does not appear to be one for the determination of maximum rates by the commission," the petition said.

"If the existing emergency has been made clear to the commission, time does not permit the exercise of the power to determine otherwise than from a relevant standpoint, the reasonableness of the proposed schedules of rates on a condition precedent to permitting them to become effective."

TO INVESTIGATE

Accordingly, the railroads recommended the investigation be made by the commission on the carriers' "statement of facts" and that application should be made for the purpose of reaching a determination as to whether the general schedules of rates proposed should be permitted to become effective without suspension.

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, June 17.—Two American marines and three national guardsmen were missing today as the result of further attacks by General Sandino's men. The missing marines were Lt. Lester E. Power and Sera Sandinist force estimated at more than 1,000 strong.

The skirmish took place in the jungle in the department of Jinotega, central Nicaragua.

TO LET CONTRACTS

COLUMBUS, O., June 16.—
State Highway Director O. W.
Merrell today called a highway meeting for June 30 when he will award contracts for $2,685,375 worth of road improvement in 26 counties.

The June 30 letting will be one of the biggest of the year. The largest held this year called for the awarding of contracts for improvements valued at $3,000,000.

With the awarding of contracts on June 30 the state will almost have exhausted its highway improvement funds for this year to see all the wonderful sights.

We have special guides to see the places that require guides and the party will be in charge of experienced conductors in going from point to point so that nothing of interest can be overlooked. By making these special arrangements this party will be able to see all that there is to see and will be able to do it in comfort and with the leisure necessary for full appreciation.

We will stop on the way to Sandusky for lunch, arriving there in time to catch the boat for Detroit at 2:30 for the beautiful trip across Lake Erie on the steamer, "Put-in-Bay", arriving in Detroit at 8 p.
m. We are met here by special coaches and will be taken to the Fort Wayne hotel where every member of the party will be assigned to a beautiful room (all with bath).

DAY'S ITINERARY

On Tuesday morning we have breakfast at the hotel and leave immediately after breakfast for Dearborn, Michigan, where we will spend the entire day visiting the various Ford developments along the River Rouge. Tuesday evening there will be a theatre party at one of the famous Detroit theatres.

Wednesday we go by motor coach to the foot of Griswold-st. to board the steamer Tashmoo for a one-day cruise up the Detroit river and across Lake St. Clair to Sarnia, Ontario, returning early in the evening.

Thursday is the real busy day
for we visit the famous buildings, down-town parks, Masonic Temple, Art Center, Dodge plant, Fisher theatre, Belle Isle and many other points of interest.

The high spot in the program on Friday is the visit to the new Detroit Zoo, the only one of its kind in America, where the animals are

WOULD PROBE OHIO COUNCIL

Vinton-Co Legislator Requests That Judicial Group Activity Be Probed.

COLUMBUS, O., June 17.—The judicial council of Ohio, of which Chief Justice C. T. Marshall of the Ohio Supreme court, is a member, today was placed under the spotlight of a perfunctory examination following a demand in the state house of representatives for a legislative investigation of the council.

The demand, contained in a resolution submitted by Rep. E. R.
King (R) of Vinton-co, provides for the appointment by the speaker of the house of a committee of five members of the lower legislative branch "to investigate activities of the judicial council of Ohio and other agencies joined with it in a study of judicial administration in Ohio."

The point of controversy suggested in King's resolution centered about the revelation that more than 60 prominent citizens of Cincinnati, Cleveland and Akron were said to have contributed more than $125,000 to defray expenses incurred by the council.

Among those who were said to have contributed funds to defray the expenses incurred in connection with the survey were: Samuel Mather, Cyrus S. Eaton and O. P. and M. J. Van Sweringen, of Cleveland, contributing $15,000 each; Col. William Cooper Proctor of Cincinnati, $9,000; John L. Severance and William G. Mather of Cleveland, $7,500 each; Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, Akron, and the Proctor Gamble Company, Cincinnati, $6,000 each;
former secretary of war Newton
D. Baker, Cincinnati; Mrs. Charles
P. Taft, Cleveland; and Joseph R.
Nutt, Cleveland, $5,000 each.

YOUTH'S FINGERS BADLY MANGLED

which he was playing on the George Shook farm in Jacksontw.

The middle and fourth finger on the right hand were severed at the joints.

Dr. Lloyd Jonnes attended the boy's injuries.

housed in settings similar to their natural habitat.

We return to Cleveland, Friday night, on board D. & C. line steamers, arriving in Cleveland Saturday morning and returning from there to Circleville on chartered

BANDIT ROBS KINGSTON MAN

Fred Dumm, Filling Station Proprietor, Relieved of $40 Tuesday eve.

The third attempt of outlaws to rob Fred Dumm, 43, Kingston, filling station proprietor, materialized at shortly after 9 p. m.
Tuesday when a lone bandit, at the point of a revolver, held up the filling station. Dumm, Wednesday, reported that $40 was taken from his pocket.

Ross-co officers are working on the case without a possible clue as the man who robbed Dumm, approached him from the rear after all the lights of the filling station, at the north end of Kingston, had been extinguished. Mr. Dumm did not know whether the man was white or colored, or whether he was large or small. He is not even certain whether a revolver was used in the holdup or not.

He had remained open as long as usual and had counted his money, preparing to leave for home. He is of the opinion that the robber stood outside the station and saw him preparing to close the place.
He had put the money in his pocket and turned out the lights, when just as he started to turn around to go to the door, someone pushed a weapon against his back.

He handed over the money, and the man left, going around the back of the oil station. Dumm did not know whether he had an automobile or wheater he walked.

Another time a man entered the station and demanded Dumm's money. Mr. Dumm obtained a hammer and told the man to "beat it" or be struck. A second time a woman drove up to the station and demanded gasoline without money to pay for it. She, too, went away.

nouncement Wednesday.

Chief Wallace of Lancaster stated lights, driving without two lights in

RAILWAYS OF NATION WANT RATE BOOST

Interstate Commerce Commission to Act Immediately on Case

REASONS STATED

15 Per Cent Increase in Freight Asked

WASHINGTON, June 17.—Confronted with serious impairment of their financial resources, and their capacity to assure a continuance of efficient and adequate service, the railroads of the country today presented a 4,500-word plea for a 15 per cent increase in freight rates to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

It has been unofficially announced on behalf of the commission that the petition would be given precedence over all other matters now pending.

Specifically, the railroads asked to be permitted to increase all freight rates and charges, including joint rail and water rates and charges, with such adjustments in the case of coal, coke and certain other commodities as will preserve existing differentials.

PERCENTAGE SCALE

Instead of horizontal increase, they asked the increase be permitted by the use of a percentage scale, and that as to coal, coke and certain other commodities, specific tariffs complying with the ordinary requirements of tariff publication be filed.

The petition said the increases will, as estimated on the basis of traffic of recent months and assuming the continuance of the present economy in transportation and maintenance expenses, yield them a net railway operating income, less than four per cent annually on a value of their property.

"Since this return will be much below the return prescribed by law, the case presented does not appear to be one for the determination of maximum reasonable rates by the commission," the petition said.

"If the existing emergency has been made clear to the commission, time does not permit the exercise of the power to determine, otherwise than from a revenue standpoint, the reasonableness of the proposed schedules of rates as a condition precedent to permitting them to become effective."

ROTARY CONVENES IN VIENNA JUNE 22

VIENNA, June 17—Delegates to an international congress, unusual even for such cosmopolitan city as this, are converging on Vienna from the Rotary club they represent in more than sixty different countries, for the 22nd annual convention of Rotary International, starting June 22.

This is the first Rotary convention over which the European members of the organization, numbering close to 25,000, have had almost entire charge. The program, the speakers and their topics, the agenda for the informal discussion assemblies, and of course the entertainment features, are all typically continental.

To a much greater extent than ever before, the thoughts of the delegates will be turned toward international relationship — financial, commercial and political. Still, the week of the convention will contain more social activities than usual for a Rotary convention.

There are still enough relics of royalty to give the American tourists a thrill. Tea for the ladies at the famous castle of Maria Theresa—Schonbrunn—and special performances at the State Opera, with some of the famous Viennese composers conducting their own operettas are typical of the entertainments arranged by the Viennese Rotarians.

One of Germany's leading industrialists, Abraham Frowein of Berlin, will give an address on the "International Aspect of Unemployment," as a climax to the clinic on economic problems which will discuss various phases of the causes of international friction. Other topics of the clinic will be tariffs, Pan-Europa, League of Nations, the present economic crisis, international finances, and the field of the International Chamber of Commerce.

The questions raised in this clinic will be considered from a Rotary point of view in special assemblies organized for Rotarians of each of the various languages, on the following day. When these assemblies have adjourned for the plenary session of the day, Prof. Axel Enstrom of Stockholm, president of the International Electrotechnical Commission, will give an address on "International Cooperation in Science."

On the opening day Viscount Cecil of Chelwood, British representative on the Geneva disarmament conference and one of the foremost British advocates of the League of Nations, will introduce the international theme into the convention with an address on "Disarmament."

Edward A. Filene of Boston, well known for his studies and writings on mass production and scientific management, will speak on the closing day on "World Trade and Standards of Living." He is especially well-known in Austria for his sympathetic interest in the reorganization of Austrian finances after the war.

Sir Charles Mander, Bart., British manufacturer, and enthusiast for Esperanto as an international language, will give a short talk in that language to demonstrate its usefulness, as an auxiliary means of communication.

To describe the purpose behind the sixth and last of Rotary's objectives, Dr. Louis R. Grote of Frankfurt a M., Germany, will deliver one of the concluding addresses of the convention, "World Wide Human Fellowship." He is head of the noted Van Noorden Clinic at Frankfurt, and one of Europe's best known physicians.

Greetings and messages of welcome from the President of Austria, Wilhelm Miklas, and the Oberburgomaster of Vienna, Karl Seitz, will be extended in the private garden of the old Imperial Palace on the first evening of convention week, at an outdoor musicale and garden party. The huge, rambling old "Burg" last occupied by Emperor Franz Josef will be thrown open to the Rotarians for inspection of its art collection.

The North American representation at the convention, about 1,500 delegates and members of their families, will reach Vienna some time this coming week. The first group, consisting of the incoming "district governors" will go on through to Sommering, a popular Alpine resort two hours distant, for a week of conference on the coming year's activities. These governors, chosen by the Rotarians of their home districts, are formally elected at the convention.

The international general officers for 1931-32 are nominated on Tuesday of convention week, voted on at polling booths Wednesday, and the ballots counted and announced on Friday. Sydney W. Pascall, one of the leading confectionery manufacturers of Great Britain, is the only candidate for the presidency of Rotary whose name has been mentioned generally. If elected, he will be the first European to be president of Rotary.

The names of the three directors from various parts of the world, chosen by the outgoing directors, are to be announced on Friday. British and Canadian Rotarians will announce the names of the members of the board they are entitled to choose, one each. There are five places for directors from the United States, and at least ten names have been presented for these positions by various groups.

The United States candidates for director include: George W. Bahlke, Baltimore, Md.; Robert E.

Heun, Richmond, Ind.; J. Murray Hill, Bowling Green, Ky.; Joseph W. Jackson, Madison, Wis.; Abit Nix, Athens, Ga.; George W. Olinger, Denver, Colo.; Arthur G. Pierce, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Frederic A. Shaffer, Globe, Ariz.; J. Raymond Tiffany, Hoboken, N. J.

The president of Rotary, Almon E. Roth, comptroller and business manager of Stanford University, California, in his opening address to the convention summarizing the year's work will strike the keynote of the week—the unique and effective way in which Rotary develops the quality of friendliness, so essential as a background for the cultivation of international goodwill and understanding.

Bob White Says:-

JACKSON TOWNSHIP
All hands around Jackson-twp is in the center, Scioto, on the north, Wayne on the south, Muhlenberg and Monroe on the west and the Scioto river is the boundary on the east. Like every township it has something to say of the Indians. There was a bitter enmity between "Captain Johnny" and Cherokee Tom, two noted Indians of that day. A battle with knives ended in Tom being slashed and sent to the Happy Hunting Grounds. His remains were found when they laid the foundation for the brick house on the White farm.

AN INDIAN LEGEND
There was a legend of an old Indian, known as "No-So-Much". He sat by his wigwam smoking his pipe, and when other Indians sat down he would begin to tell of all the wonderful things he had done. He was very loathe to listen to the tales of others. His tales were pure figments of his imagination. One by one the other Indians would leave him alone with his wonderful tales. He lived long. His old comrades passed on to the Happy Hunting Grounds and he was alone talking to himself. His death was painless. If he had lived in these days he would have been classed as a paranoiac. There are some cases extant among the whites today.

While the Army of Lord Dunmore lay at Camp Charlotte waiting for the treaty with Indians to be concluded, John Joliff, a private soldier, discovered a fine tract of land in what is known now as Jackson-twp. In 1774 a survey was made without compass or chain. Many attempts have been made to invalidate it but without success. This survey was confirmed by the courts. Johnathan Renick was the first settler and for over a hundred years, "Renick" was a name best known in Jackson-twp.

FIRST SCHOOL
About 1807, the first school house was erected just below the John Renick farm. This land is now in the hands of others but remains a most valuable tract of land. An early school was kept by James Warren, (other Warrens have been well-known as educators).

If Jackson-twp has one thing that has done much to place it in the front rank of Pickaway-co townships, it is the fine centralized school. There are many names that will remain (like the sturdy oaks and elms of the forest) honored for decades to come as foremost among Jackson's pioneers. State Route 104 passes through Fox where politics, religion and schools are discussed. The fine centralized school is just across the road from Fox.

Bob White says:
JUNE
I love to go up Jackson way in June—
No where in the Universe are things more in tune.
The waving of the wheat—and bowing of the trees
Are things you can't help but love—unless you're hard to please.

The old Swearingen ancestral home has been somewhat remodeled but has part of the old log house of early days. It is north across the pike from the home of James Swearingen. Brabant, a province of Holland was the home of the ancestors of the Swearingens that "we know." There is a lot of history about the Swearingens, all to the credit of the name but too long for this short sketch. Jackson-twp was at one time the center of social activities. The old platform dances, with "swing your partners," "balance all," etc., Those were gay, happy days, but it is of other things we must think of today. The kindly and neighborly feeling for all the surrounding country is well-known and will become stronger as time passes. Jackson-twp has progressive farmers today that the natives are proud of. No backward step will ever be seen in Jackson. It is to the broadmindedness of these people that Jackson's high place in educational matters can be attributable. Let the good work go on.

The usefulness of the carrier pigeon in war was first demonstrated at the siege of Paris during the Franco-Prussian War. The British government inaugurated a pigeon mail service into the beleaguered city. During the World War, despite the development of the telephone and the radio, there were 50,000 active pigeons behind the lines and 100,000 men trained to handle them.

JACKSON TOWN-SHIP
All lanes around Jackson-twp is in the center, Scioto on the north, Wayne on the south, Muhlenberg and Madison on the west and the Scioto river is the boundary on the east. Like every township it has something to say of the Indians. There was a bitter enmity between "Captain Johnny" and Cherokee Tom, two noted Indians of that day. A battle with knives ended in Tom being slashed and sent to the Happy Hunting Grounds. His remains were found when they laid the foundation for the brick house on the White farm.

AN INDIAN LEGEND
There was a legend of an old Indian, known as "No-So-Much". He sat by his wigwam smoking his pipe and when other Indians sat down he would begin to tell of all the wonderful things he had done. He was very loathe to listen to the tales of others. His tales were pure figments of his imagination. One by one the other Indians would leave him alone with his wonderful tales. He lived long. His old comrades passed on to the Happy Hunting Grounds and he was alone talking to himself. His death was painless. If he had lived in these days he would have been classed as a paranoiac. There are some cases extant among the whites today.

While the Army of Lord Dunmore lay at Camp Charlotte waiting for the treaty with Indians to be concluded, John Joliff, a private soldier, discovered a fine tract of land in what is known now as Jackson-twp. In 1774 a survey was made without compass or chain. Many attempts have been made to invalidate it but without success. This survey was confirmed by the courts. Johnathan Renick was the first settler and for over a hundred years, "Renick" was a name best known in Jackson-twp.

FIRST SCHOOL
About 1807, the first school house was erected just below the John Renick farm. This land is now in the hands of others but remains a most valuable tract of land. An early school was kept by James Warren, (other Warrens have been well-known as educators). If Jackson-twp has one thing that has done much to place it in the front rank of Pickaway-co townships it is the fine centralized school. There are many names that will remain (like the sturdy oaks and elms of the forest) honored for decades to come as foremost among Jackson's pioneers State Route 104 passes through Fox where politics, religion and schools are discussed. The fine centralized school is just across the road from Fox.

Bob White says:

I love to go up Jackson way in June—
No where in the Universe are things more in tune,
The waving of the wheat—and bowing of the trees
Are things you can't help but love—unless you're hard to please

The old Swearingen ancestral home has been somewhat remodeled but has part of the old log house of early days. It is north across the pike from the home of James Swearingen. Brabant, a province of Holland was the home of the ancestors of the Swearingens that "we know." There is a lot of history about the Swearingens, all to the credit of the name but too long for this short sketch. Jackson-twp was at one time the center of social activities. The old platform dances, with "swing your partners," "balance all," etc., Those were gay, happy days, but it is of other things we must think of today. The kindly and neighborly feeling for all the surrounding country is well-known and will become stronger as time passes. Jackson-twp has progressive farmers today that the natives are proud of. No backward step will ever be seen in Jackson. It is to the broadmindedness of these people that Jackson's high place in educational matters can be attributable. Let the good work go on—

The usefulness of the carrier pigeon in war was first demonstrated at the siege of Paris during the Franco-Prussian War. The British government inaugurated a pigeon mail service into the beleaguered city. During the World War, despite the development of the telephone and the radio, there were 50,000 active pigeons behind the lines and 100,000 men trained to handle them.

IMPROVEMENTS ARE NOTED IN BUSINESS IN MANY DISTRICTS

WASHINGTON.—Some substantial improvements in business and employment conditions in various parts of the country were noted in reports from district managers to the commerce department today.

In other centers better situations were anticipated in the autumn, although no changes occurred during the past week. Relatively few declines were reported.

Reports from various cities follow:

New York City.—Substantial public and private building improvements were under way with a slight decrease in the number of unemployed registered with the police department.

Philadelphia.—The general feeling indicated favorable fall business, with a number of industries, especially the textile groups reporting advanced orders. Sales of new and second-hand automobiles continued to increase.

Wilmington, Del.—A splendid improvement was noted in retail store receipts. Unemployment was still a source of worry.

Buffalo.—Although there were no definite changes in local economic conditions business conditions were gathering momentum. For six weeks there has been a certain definite slow gain. The improved outlook for 1931 as compared with 1930 is apparent in this month's total of new proposed construction.

Boston.—May payrolls declined seven per cent. Employment in the woolen industry increased six per cent but payrolls dropped seven per cent. New orders for cotton goods were slightly better than April.

Chicago.—Developments in local markets during the past week particularly the retail merchandise field gave a tone of firmness to the city's business activity. Response was good, with summer lines of women's wearing apparel, household accessories and vacation supplies being bought in large quantities. Seasonal demand for men's summer clothes and straw hats was heavy.

Detroit.—Department store sales for April and May were considerably below last year. A seasonal decline in manufacturing has cut the employment index. There was an increase in registration for employment due to the slackening in manufacturing.

Indianapolis.—Building permits increased over April during May.

Contrast Vogue Rules In Blouse During Summer

PARIS.—Summer blouses are really very summery this season, coming as they mostly all do in fine linen, bastiste, all-over eyelet embroidery, pique and novelty washable silks, nearly always with shiny faconne designs on dull ground. Lace is another very summery medium which has come to the fore, particularly in cream tints and lingerie types such as Alencon. Fine Woolen laces are also much in vogue.

The contrast vogue so prevalent in costumes of all kinds is also of great importance among blouses this summer. Charlotte Revyl uses white handkerchief linen covered with eyelet embroidery in red and blue, save for the bands of white forming collar, outlining the yoke and bordering the peplum.

Jenny uses a novelty silk pique with collar and tabs outlined by biases and a flat red flower applied to the outer tab. Another in fancy silk has small shiny dots woven into a dull ground and all the edges are scalloped. Of special interest is the usual back yoke in one piece with short sleeves.

Another designer is making the sleeves the most important part of her organdie blouse with a low blouse puff falling below the short cap. It is trimmed with ruffings of tulle which also make many sleeves these days.

For evening there are décollete blouses entirely covered with small sequins except at the waistline where the silk is left plain so that it tucks into the top of the skirt if one wishes and makes no bulkiness.

There was a slight decrease in employment in May and a greater decrease as compared with the same month last year.

Des Moines.—Meat packing and food products industries showed higher employment, while agricultural implement, foundry and machine shop, and iron and steel showed declines. Recent rains have caused an improvement in the corn crop prospects. Retail trade has strengthened and automobile sales are good.

Minneapolis.—The general business tone was more optimistic. Local bank deposits have set a new record.

St. Louis.—There has been a slight improvement in the demand for office workers. Weather conditions were generally favorable to Missouri crops and farm operations. Wheat and corn are in excellent condition.

Kansas City.—The Kansas City Provident Association reported expenditures for relief over three times greater than this time last year.

Denver.—There was a decrease in the number of skilled laborers employed in May as compared with April, while unskilled labor at work remained about the same. An improvement in employment conditions was anticipated within the next few months with the harvesting of the new crops.

PIGEON IS THE NOBLEST

OF all the birds that man has taken unto himself for a friend, the pigeon is the noblest. The peacock is as vain as he is handsome. The turkey is pompous, and the hen, excellent and necessary though she is for many purposes, has a mean, fussy and timorous disposition. The parrot is a tolerable companion, but he has no brains and his wit is unconscious, and therefore no wit at all. And the canary invaluable in a submarine or down a mine shaft as a test of the purity of the air, is very poor eating. But the pigeon is splendid as well as useful in his life, and in death he is a considerable delicacy to the epicure.

Seedless Oranges

The original seedless oranges were produced in Brazil by means of budding and the orange trees of this type in the United States all descended from two important Brazilian trees. Buds or budding sticks are taken from seedless orange trees in spring or fall and inserted in two-year-old seedling orange trees of ordinary type. When the buds send out shoots the seedlings are cut back so that only the budding portions develop.

It is a policy of the forest service of the United States Department of Agriculture not to acquire standing timber except incidentally, but to devote most of its energies to acquiring cut-over and burned lands which can be secured very cheaply and which, under proper management, can be restored to productivity and each become a valuable addition to the public forest.

Chic Women Now Put Gems Aside; Necks Unadorned

PARIS.—Yes, we have no diamonds, pearls, or rubis today, seems to be the summer cry of chic women now seen at smart gatherings in Paris.

Jewelry of all kinds is conspicuous for its absence. Bare necks and arms are the rule, which must be pleasing to all the numerous beauty specialists, for it means that their goods and their services are naturally more in demand than ever before. For now the skin must be in tip-top shape with nothing to distract the attention from the forearm and shoulders and no strings of pearls to draw the eye away from the throat itself.

Some say the family jewels had to be pawned because of the prevailing hard times on both sides of the water. Others think that the women can't keep up their insurance and have sent their jewels to their banks.

Perhaps if the real truth were told, it would be something on this order:

As soon as costume jewelry, like every other known fashion, became so common, it was bound to go the way of all good things. Then, too, fashions today are not the kind that can stand cheap flashy things. It must be the real stuff or none at all, say the smart designers. So when you see any jewels at all these days, you may be pretty certain they are real.

They Pay to See

BUSINESS instinct is a wonderful thing. It is the difference between success and failure. For the possessor, who is also fortunate enough to have the opportunity to use it, it is an asset worth a fortune.

The dirigible mooring mast atop the new Empire State building in New York City illustrates the point. When the builders announced their intention to invest hundreds of thousands of dollars in a mooring mast for commercial dirigibles above the fogs of Manhattan, the Sons of Rest from their curbstones bleachers below sagely pronounced them "crazy." The Empire State building would be razed as obsolete, before the dirigible came into commercial use, they opined.

But former Governor Al Smith and his associates went ahead with their mooring mast and do not regret their "foolhardiness."

The building is completed and an average of 3,000 persons a day pay $1 a head for an elevator ride to the top of the tower. The tower or mast dumped $104,000 in to the pockets of the owners the first month and promises revenue in excess of $1,000,000 for the first year. Tower earnings of only $750,000 will pay two per cent on the total cost of the building.

Visitors paying 50 cents each to view the metropolitan panorama from the Woolworth building lanterns have contributed an average of $136,000 a year for 17 years, more than paying for the tower.

The Empire building's mooring mast not only will net tremendous revenue from sightseers but has an advertising value which will attract tenants to the building. It will make the building world famous which means prestige for any business giving it as its office address.

Air Mail Expansion

COMMERCIAL aviation in the United States has reached its present advanced stage of development principally because of judicious and generous encouragement by the government through the maintenance and equipment of air routes and through subsidies in the form of air mail contracts.

Commercial lines follow the air mail lines because the government provides the latter with beacons and radio and weather stations, without which efficient operation is impossible. Commercial aviation does not provide this equipment for its self because the cost is prohibitive. The government further subsidizes commercial lines by granting them air mail contracts at more than the cost of the mail service to the people.

Does this pay the country? Let the figures speak for themselves. In the last four years the air mail system increased from $639 to 41,501 miles. Of that system 15,258 miles are lighted for night flying and 3221 miles are under construction. The government also maintains 45 radio stations and 143 weather stations for the guidance of mail and other pilots.

Aviation cost the federal government $20,015,969 last year, but business costs it money well spent, the taxpayers do not complain and the expenditure is largely responsible for giving the country a more nearly adequate air transportation system and for lowering in two years the air mail fatalities from one for every 889,454 miles flown to one for every 4,105,023 miles.

The United States has built an air mail and transportation system of which it can be proud and to which it is turning more and more for safe, rapid transit.

AN INVESTMENT IN FUTURES

Following the crash of his plane in Joan Marbury's Florida orange groves, young and wealthy Dave Ordway is content with the peaceful life on the plantation that is a contrast to his former pleasure-seeking existence. Adventure awaits him here, however. Mueller, brutal owner of the adjoining groves, is trying to force his attentions upon Joan. He robs Dave and burns his plane because Dave refuses his demands for damage to Mueller's property in landing Joan's cousin, Sally, who lives on the plantation, is in love with Dave, but he is more attracted by the reserved Joan. When Dave's erstwhile fiancée, Barbara Holworthy, and his friends, Gerry Flemming and Talbot Henderson, visit him, he is aware of the antagonism among the girls. Gerry recognizes Mueller as "Snatch" Cazzoni, a boot-legger. The boys leave to steal Mueller's plane to replace Dave's. They discover Mueller's liquor store. Fearing trouble Dave has Talbot return to warn the girls to stay at home. They disregard the warning. Hearing a rumour, the boys prepare for Mueller's attack. Figures loom in the darkness. Dave grapples with one. It is Joan. On impulse, they kiss. Dave orders Gerry to see the girls back safely while he stands guard. Joan gives Dave her automatic.

CHAPTER XXIV

"GOOD luck, Dave," said Joan's voice out of the darkness. "And please be careful."

Before he could say a word, her hand slipped out of his and she was no longer there. He took a step after her, reached out and touched a ponderous figure. Hannah moaned dimly and stumbled away.

"Come on, girls," came Talbot's cheerful voice. "This place is going to be fuller than the Yankee Stadium in a few minutes."

Dave turned abruptly into the great room which faced the other houses. Mueller's men were now searching the abandoned dwelling next door. Their flashlights were swinging this way and that. The sound of their voices came clearly across the tangle of scrub. From the hallway behind him Dave could hear the shuffling of feet as Talbot and Gerry herded their charges out of the front door.

A Tight Spot

"That shot came from the other house, I tell yuh, and the yelling did, too!"

That harsh voice from the outer "blackneck" dwelling like Mueller's, "he heck it did!" retorted a muffled voice from within the other house. "It came right out here! I'm going upstairs now."

With sudden decision, Dave pocketed Joan's automatic and eased himself over the windowless sash. He dropped lightly into what had once been a garden. There, hidden by a clump of sharp-leaved palmetto, he stared through the darkness toward the searching men, ready to distract their attention should they discover his retreating friends.

He saw the darting flashlights stabbing the darkness of the second-floor windows. A good dozen men were ransacking the empty house, but they sounded like an army. Dave listened intently, attempting to tune his ears to other sounds, to noises which might be made by Talbot, Gerry and the girls.

"Come on, you guys," shouted someone from the underbrush beside the house. "There's the dump over there they must be in."

Swiftly, silently, Dave began to work his way through the scrub, cutting a wide circle to the left. Three or four minutes more and his friends would be safely at their cars. His scalp tingled and his skin felt tight and drawn as the men began to pour out of the house and direct their flashlights toward the abandoned dwelling he and the others had just left. It seemed an hour before he felt sure sufficient time had passed so that the others would have reached the parked cars. Mueller and his men were now crashing through the knee-high underbrush, deploying around to the rear of the silent, windowless house.

With a long sigh of heartfelt relief Dave turned his back upon them and made his way toward the cars.

Getting Even

Gerry and Talbot walked ahead of the girls, breaking a path through the twisted creepers and sawgrass. Joan, marching silently behind her cousin, felt a hand on her arm.

"Wasn't that Dave's voice calling you, Miss Marbury?" whispered Barbara.

Joan hesitated in her stride. Gerry, Talbot and Sally, who had been walking in Indian file ahead, went on in the darkness. Hannah, coming to a full stop behind Barbara, looked fearfully over her shoulder.

"Please, Miss Joan," she panted, "Joan! let's us be waitin' for nothing."

"I thought I heard Dave calling you, Miss Marbury," repeated Barbara.

"Why should he call me?" asked Joan uncertainly. "Isn't it your place to be with him if he requires anyone?"

"Of course it is," replied Barbara, her voice hardening. "But there's no accounting for a young man's fancy, is there? Still, I've known Davey long enough to realize that it's wise to humor him in these little derelictions."

She abruptly pushed past Joan and walked swiftly after the others. Joan took three steps after her, then stopped and looked back toward the shadowy bulk of the house. She could hear Mueller's men tramping about in the darkness. Knowing Mueller, she had no desire to walk straight into his hands. But why should Dave have called to her? Surely he would not try to make the situation more difficult than it already was. Barbara's possessiveness and cold insolence were maddening.

"Hannah," she said with sudden decision, "you go on with the others. I'm going back."

Hannah groaned piteously. "Lard, no, Miss Joan," she wheezed. "I've plumb skinned white to take another step through dis scrub, but I've gwine back wi' you."

Barbara, hurrying through the darkness, caught up with Sally and fell into step behind her without a word. The two cars were standing in the shadow of a tall stand of palms. Gerry climbed awkwardly into his Hispano-Suiza while Talbot cranked the creaking Ford.

"I'll drive this pogo stick," announced Talbot, cheerfully. "Come on, girls, climb in. Gerry, you wait here for Dave."

Sally and Barbara clambered into the tonneau of the rusty little car. Talbot fingered the throttle lever and hesitated, his blue eyes squinting through the darkness. "Where's Miss Marbury?" he asked, puzzled.

"She and Hannah have decided to wait for Davey," said Barbara in a low voice. "It's really quite touching. They'll probably be along together and ride back to the house in the Hispano."

"Isn't that just like a girl, to change the plans at the last minute," muttered Talbot, uneasily. Sally opened her mouth to speak, then closed it firmly, moving a little away from Barbara. Talbot, listening intently, heard a grinning in the underbrush. He craned contentedly, pulled the throttle and stamped on the forward speed pedal. The Ford shuddered and leaped ahead into the night.

Dave, bursting out of the thicket, leaped on the running board of the low-slung sport car, which glided away without a sound. He settled himself into the luxurious cushions with a sigh of relief and glanced ahead at the flickering tail light of the Ford. "Got away just in time," he said. "They were just surrounding the house when I ducked out. The girls all right?"

"Sure," said Gerry, morosely. "They're all in the Ford. Don't see why we have to follow them at all. Leaving good ruckus behind. Wasting good liquor."

"Dave!" whispered Joan, advancing slowly through the utter blackness of the hallway. "Dave!"

Hannah, her huge bulk lost in the surrounding darkness, was moaning three low chattering teeth. The house was filled with strange noises, echoes of the shouts from the yard outside. The long silver beam of a searchlight probed through a broken window in what had once been the living room. Its reflection shone through the arched doorway and caused the endless expanse of the hall to glow with a ghostly light. Then it was gone and the corridor was as dark as before.

"Dave!" called Joan, again. "Dis ain't enny place for us to be triffin' aroun', Miss Joan," said Hannah, tremulously. "Let's us be gwine home."

"Be quiet, Hannah!" whispered the girl, sternly.

Dangerous Ground

She tiptoed to the doorway and peered into the great bare living room. Outside the windows flashlights were swinging this way and that. There was the sound of crashing of underbrush and of excited voices. But the room was empty.

"Dave!" she whispered. There was no answer.

She stood there, wondering what to do next. Dave had gone into that room, saying that he would stand guard while the others made good their escape. And now he was not there. Perhaps he had retreated to another room.

She remembered that over there, just to the right, had been the library, a cool, restful room, lined from floor to ceiling with well-filled shelves. How Ted Weymouth had loved that library! It all came back to Joan in a flood of poignant memories. Anne had loved it, too. Anne Weymouth, who had spent her mornings out among the hibiscus, oleanders and tea roses in the gardens and her afternoons at the tennis courts, playing with the verve and accuracy of a boy. Joan remembered gay evenings in this house. It had been a sort of rendezvous for the younger set, who foraged there to dance of an evening to the radio. And now it was no longer a home. It was just a house, abandoned to the violence of tropic elements, waiting patiently for the jungle to sweep over it.

Young and Old Should Swim for Good Health

No Other Sport Is So Vitalizing and Beneficial, Says Authority, Urging Those Who Gave It Up with Youth to Return to It.

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.,

United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

AS I write this I am sitting beside the still waters of the Great Sound in Bermuda. It is a wonderful day and all seems well with the world. The tangle of the curative methods. Years ago in Hamburg, Germany, I saw hundreds of persons suffering from rheumatism and joint ailments, who were kept immersed in tubs of running water. Their heads were supported in such a way as to make drowning impossible. The patients fell asleep.

Swimming is one of the best of sports. It is good for young and old. In my opinion, it is overlooked by all too many who would be benefited by it.

Specialists have long regarded bathing as one of the most important of the curative methods. Years ago in Hamburg, Germany, I saw hundreds of persons suffering from rheumatism and joint ailments, who were kept immersed in tubs of running water. Their heads were supported in such a way as to make drowning impossible. The patients fell asleep.

Perhaps that was more or less of a fad, but no one can doubt that the physical exercise of swimming is decidedly beneficial. Even for persons who are partially paralyzed, it is helpful. Indeed, it is one of the recognized treatments for children who have had infantile paralysis. It helps to strengthen the muscles and to restore function.

In swimming, the muscles of the arms, legs and trunk are called into action. Back and chest muscles, as well as the long muscles are given thorough exercise. If you have a weak heart, or are "short-winded" from any cause, you must use common sense. Surf bathing, racing and overtraining must be avoided. But no matter how frail you may be, swimming in still and not too cold water, will do you good. It is a great mistake to stay in the water too long. You have been in too long if you fail to read well from the brisk rubbing with a coarse towel. There should be a glorious glow after the skin is dry.

It is well to begin the season gradually. It is surprising how lame and worn out overdoing will cause you to be.

Some of you used to swim when you were young. Why not do it now? It will help you to stay young and to renew your youth.

Needless to say, the water must be pure. The shores and bath houses must be clean. Under proper conditions swimming deserves far more popularity than it has.

New Traffic Problems

MOTOR buses properly and constantly operated are an important public convenience, and there is justification for allowing them to use the public highways under necessary supervision. When allowed such franchises, however, they should be bound by the conditions of the road and the rules that apply to other vehicles, and the growing practice of endangering other motorists and their own passengers in the order to "make time" should be stamped out.

Bus operators, faced with the necessity of maintaining fast time schedules, often have an incentive to abuse the privileges of the road and endanger life and property. Nothing will be gained by penalizing them for recklessness if their employers penalize them for failure to maintain their schedules.

In a number of states the highway administrations, police and Zooming over country roads at a sixty-mile-an-hour clip in a sporty roadster is a lot of fun if speed cops aren't in the offing. But when you have to watch what you say as well as the wheel and road it is something else again.

Adolphe Menjou and Leila Hyams had just that experience in making the exciting automobile scenes for "Men Call It Love," which will open Wednesday at the Cliftona Theater. It is an adaptation of the famous Vincent Lawrence stage hit, "Among the Mad."

"Other Men's Women," the Warner Bros production which comes to the Grand Theater Wednesday is a tremendous story of elemental passion, brute strength, love, sacrifice and devotion.

Its background is a smoke-shrouded region of thundering trains, crumbling bridges and swirling waters, not to forget the rose-covered cottage where Jack, the engineer lives happily with Lily, his pretty wife. Devoted to each other, they share affection for Bill, the fireman, drunken but likable, and in time taken into the home of the newly weds as a boarder.

The prosperity of your community depends in a great way on your spending your money there. Don't forget it!

The business concerns of your city should have your trade not only today but every day.

BECAUSE local concerns can serve you better than those in other cities.

BECAUSE they have large stocks at reasonable prices and can fill your every requirement. They are right on the spot in plain sight and take all responsibility for goods sold. They can give you better satisfaction.

They Pay to See
BUSINESS instinct is a wonderful thing. It is the difference between success and failure. For the possessor, who is also fortunate enough to have the opportunity to use it, it is an asset worth a fortune.

The dirigible mooring mast atop the new Empire State building in New York city illustrates the point. When the builders announced their intention to invest hundreds of thousands of dollars in a mooring mast for commercial di-rigibles above the fogs of Manhattan, the Sons of Rest from their curbstone bleachers below sagely pronounced them crazy. The Empire State building would be razed as obsolete before the dirigible came into commercial use, they opined.

But former Governor Al Smith and his associates went ahead with their mooring mast and do not regret their "foolhardiness."

The building is completed and an average of 3,000 persons a day pay $1 a head for an elevator ride to the top of the tower. The tower or mast dumped $104,000 in to the pockets of the owners the first month and promises revenue in excess of $1,000,000 for the first year.
Tower earnings of only $750,000 will pay two per cent on the total cost of the building.

Visitors paying 50 cents each to view the metropolitan panorama from the Woolworth building lanterns have contributed an average of $136,000 a year for 17 years, more than paying for the tower.

The Empire building's mooring mast not only will net tremendous revenue from sightseers but has an advertising value which will attract tenants to the building. It will make the building world famous which means prestige for any business giving it as its office address.

Air Mail Expansion
COMMERCIAL aviation in the United States has reached its present advanced stage of development principally because of judicious and generous encouragement by the government through the maintenance and equipment of air routes and through subsidies in the form of air mail contracts.

Commercial lines follow the air mail lines because the government provides the latter with beacons and radio and weather stations, without which efficient operation is impossible. Commercial aviation does not provide this equipment for itself because the cost is prohibitive. The government further subsidizes commercial lines by granting them air mail contracts at more than the cost of the mail service to the people.

Does this pay the country? Let the figures speak for themselves.
In the last four years the air mail system increased from $929 to 41-501 miles. Of that system 15-258 miles are lighted for night flying and 3221 miles are under construction. The government also maintains 45 radio stations and 143 weather stations for the guidance of mail and other pilots.

Aviation cost the federal government $20,015,969 last year, but business counts it money well spent, the taxpayers do not complain and the expenditure is largely responsible for giving the country a more nearly adequate air transportation system and for lowering in two years the air mail rates from one for every $89.454 miles flown to one for every 4,105-023 miles.

The United States has built an air mail and transportation system of which it can be proud and to which it is turning more and more for safe, rapid transit.

Following the crash of his plane in Joan Marbury's Florida orange groves, young and wealthy Dave Ordway is content with the peaceful life on the plantation that is a contrast to his former pleasure-seeking existence. Adventure awaits him here, however. Mueller, brutal owner of the adjoining groves, is trying to force his attentions upon Joan. He robs Dave and burns his plane because Dave refuses his demands for damage to Mueller's property in landing. Joan's cousin, Sally, who lives on the plantation, is in love with Dave, but he is more attracted by the reserved Joan.
When Dave's erstwhile fiancée, Barbara Holworthy, and his friends, Gerry Flemming and Talbot Henderson, visit him, he is sworn the antagonism among the girls. Gerry recognizes Mueller as "Snatch," Cazzoni, a boot-legger. The boys leave to steal Mueller's plane to replace Dave's.
They discover Mueller's liquor store. Fearing trouble Dave has Talbot return to warn the girls to stay at home. They disregard the warning. Hearing a rumour, the boys prepare for Mueller's attack.
Figures loom in the darkness.
Dave grapples with one. It is Joan. On impulse, they kiss. Dave orders Gerry to see the girls back safely while he stands guard. Joan gives Dave her automatic.

CHAPTER XXIV

"GOOD luck, Dave," said Joan's voice out of the darkness. "And please be careful."

Before he could say a word, her hand slipped out of his and she was no longer there. He took a step after her, reached out and touched a ponderous figure. Hannah moaned dimly and stumbled away.

"Come on, girls," came Talbot's cheerful voice. "This place is going to be fuller than the Yankee Stadium in a few minutes."
Dave turned abruptly into the great room which faced the other rooms. Mueller's men were now searching the abandoned dwelling near door. Their flashlights were swinging this way and that. The sound of their voices came clearly across the tangle of scrub. From the hallway behind him Dave could hear the shuffling of feet as Talbot and Gerry herded their charges out of the front door.

A Tight Spot

"That shot came from the other house, I tell you, and the yelling did, too!"

"That harsh voice from the outer darkness sounded like Mueller's."
"The heck it did!" retorted a muffled voice from within the other house. "It came right out here! I'm going upstairs now."

With sudden decision, Dave pocketed Joan's automatic and eased himself over the windowless sash. He dropped lightly into what had once been a garden.
There, hidden by a clump of sharp-leaved palmetto, he stared through the darkness toward the searching men, ready to direct their attention should they discover his retreating friends.

He saw the darting flashlights stabbing the darkness of the second-floor windows. A good dozen men were ransacking the empty house, but they sounded like an army. Dave listened intently, attempting to tune his ears to other sounds to noise which might be made by Talbot, Gerry and the girls.
"Come on, you guys," shouted someone from the underbrush beside the house. "There's the dump over there they must be in."

Getting Even

Gerry and Talbot walked ahead of the girls, breaking a path through the twisted creepers and sawgrass. Joan, marching silently behind her cousin, felt a hand on her arm.
"Wasn't that Dave's voice calling you, Miss Marbury?" whispered Barbara.
Joan hesitated in her stride.
Gerry, Talbot and Sally, who had been waiting in Indian file ahead, went on in the darkness. Hannah, coming to a full stop behind Barbara, looked fearfully over her shoulder.
"Please, Miss Joan," she panted,
"don't let us be waitin' for nothing."
"I thought I heard Dave calling you, Miss Marbury," repeated Barbara.
"Why should he call me?" asked Joan, uncertainly. "Isn't it your place to be with him if he requires anyone?"
"Of course it is," replied Barbara, her voice hardening. "But there's no accounting for a young man's fancy, is there? Still, I've known Dave long enough to realize that it's wise to humor him in these little derelictions."

She abruptly pushed past Joan and walked swiftly after the others. Joan took three steps after her, then stopped and looked back toward the shadowy bulk of the house. She could hear Mueller's men tramping about in the darkness. Knowing Mueller, she had no desire to walk straight into his hands. But why should Dave have called to her? Surely he would not try to make the situation more difficult than it already was. Barbara's possessiveness and cold insolence were maddening.

"Hannah," she said with sudden decision, "you go on with the others. I'm going back."
Hannah groaned piteously.
"Lard, no, Miss Joan," she whined. "I've plumb skeered white to take another step through dis scrub, but I've gwine back wif you."
Barbara, hurrying through the darkness, caught up with Sally and fell into step behind her without a word. The two cars were standing in the shadow of a tall stand of palms. Gerry climbed awkwardly into his Hispano-Suiza
while Talbot cranked the creaking Ford.
"I'll drive this pogo stick," announced Talbot, cheerfully. "Come on, girls, climb in. Gerry, you wait here for Dave."
Sally and Barbara clambered into the tonneau of the rusty little car. Talbot fingered the throttle lever and hesitated, his blue eyes squinting through the darkness.
"Where's Miss Marbury?" he asked, puzzled.
"She and Hannah have decided

Dangerous Ground

She tiptoed to the doorway and peered into the great bare living room. Outside the windows flashlights were swinging this way and that. There was the sound of crashing of underbrush and of excited voices. But the room was empty.
"Dave!" she whispered. There was no answer.
She stood there, wondering what to do next. Dave had gone into that room, saying that he would stand guard while the others made good their escape. And now he was not there. Perhaps he had retreated to another room.

She remembered that over there, just to the right, had been the library, a cool, restful room, lined from floor to ceiling with well-filled shelves. How Ted Weymouth had loved that library! All came back to Joan in a flood of poignant memories. Anne had loved it, too.
Anne Weymouth, who had spent her mornings-out among the bibissops, oleanders and tea roses in the gardens and her afternoons at the tennis courts, playing with the verve and accuracy of a boy. Joan remembered gay evenings in this house. It had been a sort of range for the younger set, who fostered there to dance of an evening to the radio. And now was no longer a home. It was just a house, abandoned to the violence of tropic elements, waiting patiently for the jungle to sweep over it.

Young and Old Should Swim for Good Health

No Other Sport Is So Vitalizing and Beneficial, Says Authority, Urging Those Who Gave It Up with Youth to Return to It.

United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

AS I write this I am sitting beside the still waters of the Great Sound in Bermuda.
It is a wonderful day and all seems well with the world. The turmoils of other lands are far away.

This morning
I sat on the rocks, overlooking
one of the island's charming bathing beaches. The young folks dis-
ported themselves like a lot
of beautiful
mermaids and husky mermen.

Swimming is one of the best of sports. It is good for young and old. In my opinion, it is overlooked by all too many who would be benefited by it.

Specialists have long regarded bathing as one of the most important of the curative methods. Years ago in Hamburg, Germany, I saw hundreds of persons suffering from rheumatism and joint ailments, who were kept immersed in tubs of running water. Their heads were supported in such a way as to make drowning impossible. In the patients fell asleep.

Perhaps that was more or less of a fad, but no one can doubt that the physical exercise of swimming is decidedly beneficial. Even for persons who are partially paralyzed it is a helpful aid. It is one of the recognized treatments for children who have had infantile paralysis, and to restore function.

If you have a weak heart, or are "short-winded" from any cause, you must use common sense. Surf bathing, racing and overstraining must be avoided. But no matter how frail you may be, swimming in still and not too cold water, will do you good.
It is a great mistake to stay in the water too long. You have been in too long if you fail to react well from the brisk rubbing with a coarse towel. There should be a glorious glow after the skin is dry.

It is well to begin the season gradually. Do not swim too much the first day. It is surprising how lame and worn out overdoing will cause you to be.

Some of you used to swim when you were young. Why not do it now? It will help you to stay young and to conquer your youth.

Needless to say, the water must be pure. The shores and bath-houses must be clean. Under proper conditions swimming deserves far more popularity than it has.

New Traffic Problems

MOTOR buses properly and con-siderately operated are an important public convenience, and there is justification for allowing them to use the public highways under necessary supervision. When allowed such franchises, however, they should be bound by the conditions of the road and the rules that apply to other vehicles, and the growing practice of endangering other motorists and their own passengers in the order to "make time" should be stamped out.
Bus operators, faced with the necessity of maintaining fast time schedules, often have an incentive to abuse the privileges of the road and endanger life and property.
Nothing will be gained by penalizing them for recklessness if their employers penalize them for failure to maintain their schedules.
In a number of states the highway administrations, police and

AT THE CLIFTONA
Zooming over country roads at a sixty-mile-an-hour clip in a sporty roadster is a lot of fun if speed cops aren't in the offing. But when you have to watch what you says as well as the wheel and road it is something else again.
Adolphe Menjou and Lella Hyams had just that experience in making the exciting automobile scenes for "Men Call It Love," which will open Wednesday at the Cliftona Theater. It is an adaptation of the famous Vincent Lawrence stage hit, "Among the Mried."

AT THE GRAND
"Other Men's Women," the Warner Bros production which comes to the Grand Theater Wednesday is a tremendous story of elementa-passion, brute strength, love, sacrifice and devotion.
Its background is a smokeshrouded region of thundering trains, crumbling bridges and swirling waters, not to forget the rose-covered cottage where Jack, the engineer lives happily with Lily his pretty wife. Devoted to each other, they share affection for Bill, the fireman, drunken but likable, and in time taken into the home of the newly weds as a boarder.

THAT the growth and permanent prosperity of a city is measured entirely by its commercial activity.

Spending money out of a community for things that can be purchased at home is just tearing down those industries that make it possible for many to make a living.

The prosperity of your community depends in a great way on your spending your money there.
Don't forget it!

The business concerns of your city should have your trade not only today but every day.

BECAUSE local concerns can serve you better than those in oth-

BECAUSE they have large stocks at reasonable prices and can fill your every requirement.
They are right on the spot in plain goods sold. They can give you better satisfaction.

IF YOU AND YOUR NEIGH-

IN YOUR OWN HOME CITY, YOU MUST GIVE UP HOPES OF
HAVING A BETTER, BRIGHTER

OBITUARY
Martha C. Peters was born near Front Royal, Va.; October 18, 1850. She was the youngest daughter and last survivor of nine children that blessed the union of John and Mary (Leach) Glascock. When she was three years old, her parents moved their family to a large farm near Harrisburg, O. Her early training consisted of an education in the public schools and a requirement to perform her share in a home-life that sparkled with the virtues of industry and frugality.
On April 3, 1873, she was united in marriage to Robert W. Peters and came to assume the duties as mistress of the Peters home in Walnut-twp., Pickaway-co., which station was destined to last for a period of nearly sixty years. Here this couple lived in those sacred ties that bind husband and wife together until Elder Peters was called to his home beyond, October 3, 1907.
This union was blessed with six children, two of whom, John G. and Mary L., having died in childhood, leaving Alvin N., of Washington C. H., Robert G., of Circleville, Lulu M., of the home and Mirtie A., of near Ashville.
Two children of the father by a former marriage, Mrs. Anne Waddell, of near Sabina and Mrs. Alice Barr, of Cedar Hill; also, two foster children, George Decker, of Springfield, O., and Mrs. Emma Shannon, of Columbus, O., shared the blessings of a Mother's love and affection.
Besides these surviving children, there also remain to mourn her departure 13 grandchildren and 14 great-grandchildren, besides many nephews, nieces and friends.
She united with Darbyville Primitive Baptist church of near Commercial Point, O., in July 1874.

which covenant she has faithfully labored to keep these many years ever looking to Jesus as her only hope of salvation from this life of sin, suffering and sorrow. She loved her family, her home and her church and all through her life the Peters residence was a welcome home for her family and church brethren. Since the departure of the husband and father, she, with the daughter, Lulu, "has kept the home fires burning." She was of a meek and quiet disposition, delighting in doing acts of kindness to her children and grandchildren. She filled so completely that exalted station of this life called "Mother" that her children only fill in part their obligations when they rise up and call her blessed. But the gate that she has gone in and out so many times in life is now closing behind her forever. Her life work is ended, her labors are over and the storms and suffering of this life are behind. Her work of faith, labor of love and patience of hope for her Lord and Master, is a consoling assurance to us that she is now basking in the sunshine of His presence in that realm of everlasting bliss.
Gone home to that Home over yonder.
Whose beauties no mortal can tell;
In Heaven and immortal glory
Where God and the angels dwell.

TRICKS of MAGIC EXPLAINED by Will L. Lindhorst
THREE MATCHES CAN BE LIFTED WITH ONE

1. Sharpen the end of one match, put a slit in the end of another and place the sharpened end in the slit so that the two matches are held together.
2. Balance a third match against the first two, forming a pyramid or tent-shape arrangement.
3. Insert the fourth match under the apex of the three, and then fasten together slightly forward so that the third match will forward beneath the first two. The three matches are then pressing against the fourth or lifting match and it will be found easy to move them.

Navy Crew Wins Annual Regatta

POUGHKEEPSIE, June 17—For the water take a sailor every time. While the 'express' foundered on a rain-pelted Hudson last evening, a despondent and half-forgotten Navy crew came slugging out of the murk to win the 34th annual intercollegiate rowing regatta in the third fastest time in the long history of this famous four-mile course.

With close to 50,000 thoroughly drenched and thoroughly amazed spectators looking on from observation train, boat, and dark green highlands shore, old Dick Glendon's surprising midshipmen from the band of the Severn took the lead from a pace-setting Washington crew at the three-mile mark and went on to stand off a fast-closing Cornell crew in the final drive.

The sailors' time, 18 minutes, 54 1-5 seconds, has been bettered only by California's world's record in 1928 and one of Pop Courtney's fabled Cornell crews in 1901, which isn't bad for a boat which scarcely had been accorded a chance in the pre-race dope.

A favorite and high-touted Cornell eight, which possibly delayed its bid too long but more likely wasn't quite good enough as the race was rowed, finished second behind the gallant middies.

Washington, which for almost three miles had looked the winner, held on gamely to save third. And the Golden Bears of California, the only other far-western representative, drove home behind the huskies.

Syracuse, battling rough water Penn was sixth, Columbia seventh, down its outside land, was fifth Wisconsin eight and M. I. T. ninth and last.

PESEK MEETS CHUCK HANSEN

Tiger-man To Be Given Supreme Test at Haft's Acre Thursday Evening.

COLUMBUS, O., June 17—John Pesek, internationally known American-mat star and generally recognized as common-law holder of the heavyweight wrestling title, will defend his claims to the championship Thursday night in Columbus at the beautiful outdoor Haft's Acre arena against Charlie Hansen of Seattle, Wash.

Hansen, who three years ago held Pesek to a no-fall two hour draw in a pupil of Farmer Burns and is considered the greatest heavyweight produced in the northwest.

Master of the uncanny 'rear drop," the trick slam hold that brought fame to Frank Gotch, the westerner in the past two weeks, has annihilated Regis Siki, the huge Abyssinian and Alan Eustace, behemoth Kansas scissoring sensation Hansen defeated both men in straight falls.

Thursday night's battle will be for two best out of three falls with a two hour time limit under American catch-as-catch-can rules.

A great supporting card has been lined up for this show making it one of the best balanced programs that has been presented here this season.

NEW YORK—Sparky Adams, diminutive third sacker of the St. Louis Cardinals, has the doubtful distinction of wearing the dirtiest uniform in the National League. Diving after hot grounders keeps Sparky shaking off more dust than a rural pedestrian on a holiday.

Hack Wilson formerly wore the dirtiest uniform in the league, but this season the $37,500 a year outfielder of the Cubs has a new distinction—that of the highest salaried bench warmer in baseball.

Roy Sherid of the New York Yankees hasn't been pitching any too well of late but he has the consolation—in his own mind at least—of having compiled a good batting record. In his first twenty-seven trips to the plate this season the Yankee hurler collected 10 hits for a neat average of .370.

Rabbit Maranville was pointing with pride recently to his model conduct during the past four years, which calls to mind one of the choice anecdotes related of the venerable Boston shortstop during his salad days. It seems that the diminutive playboy, while visiting a friend in the country promoted himself into such high spirits that he climbed up a tree and remained there for hours, refusing repeated pleas to come down and go to dinner.

The host finally hit upon the idea of luring Rabbit off his perch by fetching a cooling beverage—at any rate it was a beverage. Swinging from a limb with one hand like a monkey, the Rabbit swooped down, snatched the glass out of his flabbergasted host's hand and swung himself back to his perch in the tree again.

Several professional athletes have done well both as fighters and wrestlers. Max Schmeling, Primo Carnera and "Oom Paul" Berlenbach were wrestlers before donning the padded mitts. George Godfrey, once the "black menace" of the heavyweights, is making headway as a grappler, and frequently knocks out his opponents with stiff blows. Stanley Stasiak, one of wrestling's most entertaining "villains," used to be a fair boxer.

Bill Killefer, manager of the St. Louis Browns, thinks that Joe Cronin, crack shortstop of the Washington club, is the most valuable player in the American League.

"Take Cronin out and the Senators wouldn't have a ball club," says Bill.

Rick Ferrell has been going so well that he has caught practically every game for the Browns and the club's two rookie catchers have had little chance to do their stuff. They are Russ Young, up from Milwaukee, and Crouch, one of the many St. Louis recruits taken from the Wichita Falls, Texas club.

Those brilliant conversationalists who know nothing but "Is it cold enough for you?" in the winter time are now learning how to inquire "Is it hot enough for you?"

A rock garden is the result of the perverse notion that this generation must dump back into the garden all the stones several generations of ancestors carried from it.

BIG INNING GAME MARGIN

Circleville Oils Smack Crum in Eighth to Defeat Red Men Outfit.

One big inning, the eighth-spelled victory for the Circleville Oils Tuesday evening over the Red Men. The final score was 9-2, the Oils counting seven markers in this wild eighth frame when everyone batted.

Both teams presented crippled lineups. Don White and Judy Gordon of the Grocers, playing in the outfield for the Red Men, and George Crum, manager in the pitching box, and Valentine and Geib of the Coca Colas catching and playing center field for the Oils, with Howard White on the hill, and Dick Robinson, regular catcher in left field.

More fun was experienced in this game than in any for a long time.

The two teams started evenly with the Oils grabbing a two run lead in the first frame. The Red Men tied the score in the fourth and fifth frames, and both the sixth and seventh were tied. When the Oils came to bat in the eighth, base hits rattled to the outfield until the outcome of the game was never in doubt.

This evening the Oils and the Coca Colas will meet in a league game.

He will be pitted against Roy Slagle who has been seen in a number of tough battles recently. These men weigh in at 175 pounds and will go 30 minutes or one fall.

In the other prelim Ray Dixon London will click horns with Gypsy Joe of Columbus. This promises to be a battle to the finish as Joe is credited with 48 wins out of 50, and Dixon has a good record.

The main event of the evening will see Wayne Dunkle of London and Ray Phillips of Columbus battle for the welterweight championship of the state. Phillips is present champ but Dunkle is champion of the U. S. Navy for two consecutive years, being undefeated when he left.

Every match promises to have plenty of thrills and a large crowd is expected to attend this first wrestling match of the season.

RYDER CUP TEAM HERE

Britain's Hope in Columbus Matches Reaches American Shores Today.

NEW YORK, June 17.—Ten of Great Britain's leading golfers, comprising the British Ryder cup golf team, were greeted today by American golf officials following their arrival from England last night on the liner Majestic.

The arrivals were Archie Compston, W. H. Davies, Abe Mitchell, Charles A. Whitcombe, Ernest R. Whitcombe, Fred Robson, Geo. Duncan, Syd Easterbrook, Arthur Havers and Bert Hodson. They will play the United States Ryder cup team at Columbus, on June 26 and 27, and later will compete in the U. S. open at Toledo on July 2, 3 and 4.

The visitors were confident of victory in the Ryder cup match although they said they would be at a disadvantage playing the larger and lighter ball.

To view the results of three years' scientific research in poultry husbandry, some 2,000 farm visitors are expected to attend the annual Ohio Poultry Field Day, Wooster, June 19. The event is sponsored by the Ohio Agricultural Experiment Station in cooperation with the state college of culture.

OBITUARY
Martha C. Peters was born near Front Royal, Va., October 18, 1850. She was the youngest daughter and last survivor of nine children that blessed the union of John and Mary (Leach) Glasscock. When she was three years old, her parents moved their family to a large farm near Harrisburg, O. Her early training consisted of an education in the public schools and a requirement to perform her share in a home-life that sparkled with the virtues of industry and frugality.

On April 3, 1873, she was united in marriage to Robert W. Peters and came to assume the duties as mistress of the Peters home in Walnut-twp, Pickaway-co, which station was destined to last for a period of nearly sixty years. Here this couple lived in those sacred ties that bind husband and wife together until Elder Peters was called to his home beyond, October 3, 1907.

This union was blessed with six children, two of whom, John G. and Mary L., having died in childhood, leaving Albert N., of Washington, C. H., Robert G., of Circleville, Lulu M., of the home and Mirrie A., of near Ashville.

Two children of the father by a former marriage, Mrs. Anne Waddell, of near Sabina and Mrs. Alice Barr, of Cedar Hill; also, two foster children, George Decker, of Springfield, O., and Mrs. Emma Shannon, of Columbus, O., shared the blessings of a Mother's love and affection.

Besides these surviving children, there also remain to mourn her departure 13 grandchildren and 14 great-grandchildren, besides many nephews, nieces and friends.

She united with Darbyville Primitive Baptist church of near Commercial Point, O., in July 1874.

TRICKS OF MAGIC EXPLAINED
by Will. Lindhorst

THREE MATCHES CAN BE LIFTED WITH ONE

1. Sharpen the end of one match, put a slit in the end of another, and place the sharpened end in the slit so that the two matches are held together.

2. Balance a third match against the first two, forming a pyramid or tent-shape arrangement.

3. Insert the fourth match under the apex of the three, and tilt the two fastened together slightly forward so that the third match falls forward beneath the first two. The three matches are then pressing against the fourth or lifting match and it will be found easy to raise them.

74 Attend June Meeting Of D. A. R. at Country Club Here

The June meeting of the Pickaway Plains chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, was held Tuesday at the Pickaway Country Club and was presided over by a luncheon served by the following hostesses: Mrs. H. D. Jackson, Mrs. George P. Foreman, Miss Dorothy McArthur, Miss Charlotte Phelps, Miss Mary Radcliff, Mrs. Frank Bennett, Miss Alice Ada May and Miss Emily Yates.

Seventy-four members and guests including members of the chapters of D. A. R. from Chillicothe, Waverly and London and representatives of Boy Scout troop No. 107 of Circleville were present. The meeting which was in charge of the new regent, Mrs. Glenn Nickerson, was opened by singing America, after which prayer was offered by the chaplain, Mrs. C. C. Watts.

Mrs. Orion King, former regent, then presented an American flag from the D. A. R. to Boy Scout troop-107.

A reading, "Old Glory," was given by Mrs. C. C. Watts. Mrs. Nickerson presented the past regent's pin to Mrs. King who in turn presented the regent's pin to Mrs. Nickerson.

After the reading of the minutes the secretary, Mrs. Emmitt Crist, read a letter from the secretary of the local Chamber of Commerce pledging their cooperation with the D. A. R. in the planting of trees for the Washington Centennial in 1932.

The D. A. R., with the consent of the board of Berger hospital, will plant an elm tree on either side of the walk at the hospital. These trees to be slips from Logan Elm.

Mrs. King reported concerning the marking of graves of Revolutionary soldiers in Pickaway-co. Miss Dorothy McArthur gave an

LUTHER LEAGUE BANQUET TUESDAY
About sixty-five attended the Luther League banquet held in the parish house, Tuesday evening in honor of the winners of a program contest that has been held in the league the past few months.

Four long tables in the form of a square were attractive, centered with bud vases of roses. The center of the square was artistically decorated with roses and various colored June flowers.

A delicious two-course dinner in charge of Miss Anna O'Connor and Miss Ida Walters was served by the losing sides of the contest. Following the dinner a program in charge of Rev. G. L. Troutman was presented.

A humorous reading, "Sis' Hopkins and Her Funny Family," by Miss Mary Crist was the first number followed by a vocal duet by Miss Grace Bower and Mrs. G. L. Troutman and a piano duet by Miss Eleanor Fitzpatrick and Miss Helen Crist.

Unique contests prepared by Rev. Troutman aroused much enthusiasm between each selection on the program. A prophecy in the form of a newspaper of league members ten years from now was edited and read by Miss Grace Bower and Miss Helen Crist.

After several more contests a talk on the benefits received from the program contest was given by Mrs. G. L. Troutman. She told of new talent that had been displayed by the programs and of the enthusiasm they had aroused. This talk concluded a very enjoyable evening.

Many Autoists Disregard Law, Survey Shows

Many of the motoring public of Circleville do not drive their cars according to signs and in compliance with law, according to a survey conducted Monday. The check was made in half-hour periods at four street intersections in the city, where a large part of the motoring and traffic may be seen.

The object of the check-up was to determine whether or not the motorists driving between the hours of 3 and 5 p. m., at which time most of the traffic can be seen, regarded the signs which have been installed by the state and city.

The first half-hour count was made at S. Court and Walnut-sts. At this spot 23 out of 38 auto drivers disregarded a "through-traffic" sign and drove into Court-st. without lessening speed or stopping. Here also four drivers out of a total of 23 did not put out their hand when turning the corner at Walnut-st. One car was parked within 10 feet of a fire plug, which is in disobedience to law.

The second checking period conducted at Court and Mound-sts., where traffic lights control the "going and stopping" problem, gave further proof that local motorists have disregard for motoring law. Although at this particular time only six out of a number of 74 cars crashed through red lights, in one instance, a wreck might have resulted. Three autos going south drove through the red light; two ran through the red going north and one motorist came onto Court-st. through the red going east on Mound-st. During this check three autoists made U turns and two drivers parked in the "non-parking" limits.

Another investigation into the same problem at another busy intersection, Franklin and Scioto-sts. showed a large number of violators. Here 14 cars out of 23 drove off Franklin-st to Scioto-st. without slowing down or stopping, two cars were parked wrong and four made U turns, which is permissible here, only not a good policy.

The final check at Franklin and Washington-sts. showed the greatest number of offenders. Nineteen out of 32 motorists drove off Washington-st into Franklin-st.

without slowing down or stopping, and 26 out of 51 drove from Franklin into Washington-st without any warning to traffic traveling north and south. At this spot four autos were parked wrong.

Many Autoists Disregard Law, Survey Shows

Many of the motoring public of Circleville do not drive their cars according to signs and in compliance with law, according to a survey conducted Monday. The check was made in half-hour periods at four street intersections in the city, where a large part of the motoring and traffic may be seen.

The object of the check-up was to determine whether or not the motorists driving between the hours of 3 and 5 p. m., at which time most of the traffic can be seen, regarded the signs which have been installed by the state and city.

The first half-hour count was made at S. Court and Walnut-sts. At this spot 23 out of 38 auto drivers disregarded a 'through-traffic' sign and drove into Court-st without lessening speed or stopping. Here also four drivers out of a total of 23 did not, put out their hand when turning the corner at Walnut-st. One car was parked within 10 feet of a fire plug, which is in disobedience to law.

The final check at Franklin and Washington-sts showed the greatest number of offenders. Nineteen out of 32 motorists drove off Washington-st into Franklin-st, without slowing down or stopping, and 26 out of 51 drove from Franklin into Washington-st without any warning to traffic traveling north and south. At this spot four autos were parked wrong.
